

DAISY MODEL 753: TARGET AIR RIFLE (.177 CALIBER)

Daisy Model 753W

The Daisy Model 753W (wood stock) and 753S (synthetic stock) target air rifles are the least expensive models in Daisy's Avanti range of air rifles to use German made Walther barrels.

This affordable air rifle is ideal for new shooters as it allows relatively safe indoor rifle practice in your home, and is a top choice for Sporter Air Rifle matches hosted by groups like the National Rifle Association and the Civilian Marksmanship Program.

Low power rimfire rifles can also be safe to use without hearing protection like this air rifle when used with subsonic rounds like CCI's Quiet-22 (68 dB at the shooter's ear), but they use gunpowder, the residue from which makes them unsuited to use inside homes, while rimfire rifles are much more expensive to shoot than air rifles due to the far higher cost of ammunition.

This pneumatic air powered rifle is charged by operating the pump lever once, which fully charges the rifle. Pumping more than once can damage it. As there is no spring and weight involved like conventional spring pistol air rifles there is virtually no recoil. Conventional spring powered air rifles can damage rifle scopes designed for firearms as they recoil forward rather than rearward as with firearms.

The 753 series air rifles are designed for use with match type iron sights, while it is essential that one masters the use of iron sights before moving on to rifles with telescopic sights, such as high powered air rifles designed for hunting small game, rimfire rifles, or centerfire rifles.

SPORTER AIR RIFLE MATCHES

Older children who have an interest in guns need to be able to learn how to safely use a gun. This is best done by having them join a sporter air rifle match, in which inexpensive target air rifles like the 753 are used (costly accessories like shooting jackets are also banned).

Air rifle competition is a very safe and highly regulated sport that promotes concentration, discipline and the creation of friendships that transcend cultural and social barriers.

Unlike many other sports, male and female competitors are on an equal footing as the shooting sports are primarily about mental discipline, not strength, speed or fitness.

If there are no air rifle clubs near where you live you may wish to start a match in your garage, local community center or gun club with your friends using Civilian Marksmanship Program (CMP) and National Rifle Association (NRA) resources, links to which are provided on the Gunproof website (www.gunproof.org).

HOT TIP

Only pump it once as it is designed to give maximum velocity with a single pump.
